Race Relations And The Educator

Ill. Human Relations Unit, WIU Sponsors

MACOMB, Ill. — Eighteen specialists in human relations are serving as resource consultants for "Race Relations and the Educator," a 12-week workshop being held Sept. 10-Nov. 26 in Quincy, sponsored by the Illinois Commission on Human Relations (ICHR) and Western Illinois University.

More than 100 school teachers from the Quincy area are expected to enroll in the program which has been developed by Fate Echols, ICHR education consultant, and is directed by Dr. James Bozarth, WIU assistant professor of education.

Session topics and the guest resource consultants include "The Concept of a Workshop in Race Relations," Philip Walker, dean of students, Parkland College, Champaign, Sept. 10.

Quincy citizens will give their impressions of the workshop and react to Walker's talk at the Sept. 17th session. Guest panelists are: David W. Montgomery, personnel director, Gardner-Denver Co., and past president of the Quincy Board of Education; Dr. Donald A. Busbey, Jr., a dentist and member of the Quincy City Council and the Commission for Equal Opportunity; State Rep. Elmo (Mac) McClain, a member of the Illinois School Problems Commission;

Sid Landfield, former Chicago community newspaper reporter and Mount Sterling publisher, who now owns Landfield's Book Stall in Quincy; and Richard A. Thompson, former Quincy all-state basketball player and now a member of the Quincy Junior High School faculty.

Ben Williams, executive director, Evanston Human Relations Commission, will present "A View of the Black Problem from a Different Perspective" at the third session Sept. 24.

Charles Lockhart, director of police-community relations, Springfield Police Department, and William Logan, Urban League Community Organizer, Springfield, will speak Oct. 1 on "How Improved Methods in Communication Aids Human Relations."

"Misuses of History: A Black Perspective" will be presented Oct. 8 by Dr. Sherman Beverly, assistant professor, Afro-American Studies Program, Kendall College, Evanston.

The following week, Oct. 15, Mrs. Beatrice Young, director, ICHR educational services department, will guest lecture on "Misuses of History: A White Perspective."

Logan returns Oct. 22 to chair a panel discussion of "Reflections on the 'System'" by Quincy students as yet to be named.

WIU President John T. Bernhard will give his "White Reflections on Black Power in Education" Oct. 29, and John Lambert, program analyst, State Budget Bureau, Springfield, will present "Black Reflections on White Power in Education" on Nov. 5.

Lockhart will discuss "The Schools and the Authority Figure," a black policeman's view of authority and human rights, Nov. 12.

Bozarth will provide "Guidelines for the Future" on Nov. 19. He also will represent reports from sensibility groups and task team recommendations.

The Baha'i House of Worship, located on the shore of Lake Michigan at Wilmette, is in the process of having its exterior cleaned. The first year of the two year project is being devoted to the cleaning of the dome (shown above). The cornerstone of this unique structure was laid in 1912 and the completed House of Worship was formally dedicated in 1953. The funds for this $3 million edifice were provided by voluntary contributions from Baha'is throughout the world.
