WORLD PEACE DAY

The purpose of World Peace Day is to spread the recognition of America's spiritual destiny to raise the standard of peace in the world. It is sponsored annually by the U.S. Baha'i Community. This year the Baha'is are observing a Youth Year with the overall theme of "Youth for One World."

Glenford E. Mitchell secretary of the U.S. National Baha'i Assembly, stated that each year the Baha'i Faith is attracting more and more youth. "Youth are active in teaching the Faith and in pioneering to far off places to take the Message of Baha'u'llah, Prophet-Founder of the Faith."

"Baha'is," he pointed out "Do not feel there is a generation gap between youth and adults but rather a spiritual gap. This is because young and old tend to use the material world rather than a divine standard as the frame of reference for existence. The preoccupation with materialism by adults tends to cast youth into a secondary role and serves to lessen communication. The result is youth have a feeling of separation, alienation, frustration and hostility."

Baha'is see youth as having a meaningful role in society and in building a better society. The Baha'i Faith itself is a youthful religion — the youngest of the world's religions — it is 125 years old this year.
