

Baha' is To View Race Unity Day

"Who can bring us together" will be discussed Sunday when the Baha'is observe Race Unity Day at their center, 116 S. Michigan ave.

Lawrence Kramer, former member of the Chicago local Spiritual Assembly, will be the principal speaker. Purpose of the observance is to focus attention on the nation's most challenging issue today — the racial problem.

Kramer states that achieving unity of mankind is the most critical challenge of the day, adding:

"Violence and destruction inflicted upon this country as a result of its failure to remove the various forms of discrimination and unjust restriction against persons of minority and racial groups is an outward sign of a grave spiritual sickness."

The public is invited to the affair.
