

MOTHERS BEAUTIFULLY ENTERTAINED AT THEATER

The Chicago Defender (Big Weekend Edition) (1905-1966); Sep 1, 1917;

ProQuest Historical Newspapers: Chicago Defender

pg. 7

MOTHERS BEAUTIFULLY ENTERTAINED AT THEATER

Julius N. Avendorph, Chicago's most popular citizen and one of the most hospitable men in the country, showed his spirit of kind treatment for the older ladies Monday night when he took his mother, Mrs. L. A. Avendorph, 4022 Wabash avenue; Mrs. J. H. H. Sengstacke, Savannah, Ga., mother of Editor Robert S. Abbott, 3159 State street, and Mrs. Mary Burnside, 3624½ Forest avenue, to the Studebaker theater. They were immeasurably pleased and when Mr. Avendorph carried them through the tunnel which leads to the annex of the Auditorium and up the elevator, Mrs. Sengstacke thought it marvelous. The host made a splendid impression with his guests and he exhibited a spirit that might well be emulated.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.